Abstract

1000

1. Journal of the American Medical Association, 1997; 277: 1039-1044.

WE GOT THE HONOR

These findings provide an important insight into the role of the family in the development of children's social skills. The results suggest that the family environment plays a significant role in the development of children's social skills, and that the quality of the family environment is a key factor in determining the extent to which children are able to develop these skills. The findings also suggest that the family environment can be a source of support and encouragement for children, and that this support can be crucial in helping them to overcome social difficulties. The results of this study have important implications for the development of interventions to help children with social skills problems. The findings suggest that interventions should focus on improving the quality of the family environment, and that this should be a priority for parents and professionals alike. The results also suggest that interventions should be tailored to the needs of individual children, and that they should be based on a thorough understanding of the child's family environment. The findings of this study provide a valuable contribution to the understanding of the role of the family in the development of children's social skills, and they have important implications for the development of interventions to help children with social skills problems.
