Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors associated with the development of periodontitis between two groups of patients who had been treated by a periodontist or a general dentist. A total of 60 patients from each group were selected from a dental practice database. Data were collected regarding age, gender, smoking status, diabetes mellitus, and periodontal disease. The results showed that there were no significant differences between the two groups in terms of age, gender, smoking status, or diabetes mellitus. However, there was a significant difference in the prevalence of periodontitis between the two groups, with a higher prevalence found in the group treated by a periodontist.
